heavy insurance on his life, and is presumably still waiting is the region where,
if the testimony of a dozen guides, carriers and hotel porters is to be accepted, he was light seen in September, 1892.
Octavius D. Baldwin, Vice-President of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Assocation, came next to the stand to tell of the proceedings leading up to the issue in 1885, and of the two policies of insurances for $10,000 and $5,000 on the life of John C. Austin, and the proceedings since the allegd death of John C. Austin.

He was not permitted, however, to state how much his Company had paid to the beneficiaries on insurance policies in the last dozen years.

Vice-President Baldwin's testimony was all formal regarding the proofs of death submitted by Joseph E. Austin. The proofs included the affidavits of J. E. Austin, Joseph A. Dallon, the Coney Island visitor; Frank E. Lord, partner of John C. Austin; Farley Clarke, employed by Lord & Austin; Theresa A. Mahar, the nurse to the Austin children; W. W. MacFarland, Carruthers, Austin's brother-in-law, and John J. Rothwell, Ernest L. Schuman, Peter Muller and G. S. Hotchkiss.

"Do you remember the receipt of a telegram there July 5 that Jack Austin who was drowned?"

"Yes, sir," responded the servant.

"You must have been impressed then by the appearance in the flesh of the man who was drowned?" suggested Col. James with a whimsical chuckle.

"Yes, sir," I was. I was surprised to see him there."

Then Della told how she noticed that one of the spare rooms in the Summer mansion had been used the night of Wednesday—after July 4—and she knew of no visitor except that she had heard her mater. Henry La Marche, taiking with a stranger the night before at about 8.39 o'clock.

his charge. About Nov. 23 John C. Austin was there again, and remained till the witness took him away.

"I was in my own cottage that night. I heard carriage wheels. I went out. John C. Austin and Henry La Marche got out and paid the driver. It was 9 o'clock. I got the keys and opened the mansion. Mr. Henry had some bread. There were no provisions in the house. Mr. Henry had a bag, too, sir. John Applegate, who had come to take his wife home from my house, was there and saw the men alight. They went towards the woods to hunt next morning. "That day about 3 o'clock I fook them to Oceanic in a two-seated buggy. I have never seen John Austin since."

The cross-examination by Mr. Trulf failed to shake the loquacious gardener in his story. The eccentric witness created a deal of fun for the spectators, and the grave and even sedate Justice Patterson relaxed in smiles of enjoyment at the old fellow.

As the defense added item upon item to their story, rebuttal witnesses appeared in court till there were enough to assure another day, perhaps more, of testimony.

Among the rebuttal witnesses will be Messrs. Henry, John, se, Vincent and Edward La Marche, their sistors. The trial will go on to-morrow.

brother-in-law, and John J. Rothwell, Ernest L. Schuman, Peter Muller and G. S. Hotchkiss.

The witness said that J. E. Austin had promised to present letters testamentary from the Surrogate, but never did so, although reminded of it Oct. 19, 1891. He said that J. E. Austin stated that because his brother had been drowned and his body had not been recovered it would be difficult to comply with this regulation, but he would fry. That was the last ever heard of it.

J. E. Austin made a demand for the amount of the policies in February. 1892. and on refusal of payment because of lack of sufficient proof of death this suit was begun.

Mr. Baldwin testified that in August, 1891. the usual assessment had been levied on John C. Austin's policy, but mothing was paid.

Mr. Baldwin gave way to Dr. Harold F. Jewit, of 330 Clinton avenue, Brooklyn, who took the kodak photograph of his father, Dr. Charles Jowitt, and John C. Austin in hunting costume, so much discussed in the trial. He testified that the picture was taken in August, 1890, at Fenton's No. 4, in the north woods, eighteen miles from Lowville.

Mr. Baldwin resumed the stand for coss-examination, He could not remember having had any interview with any reporter regarding the Austin case in October, 1881.
